Rwiz Makes Compliance with MA Privacy Laws Easier

Software automatically prompts users to encrypt sensitive information

Waltham, MA — July 12, 2010 — Enterprise Information Resources Inc. today announced that Rwiz®, an intuitive Oracle/PeopleSoft reporting tool, makes it easier for HR and IT to protect sensitive information as defined by the requirements of the Massachusetts Data Privacy Act - 201 CMR 17.

The Massachusetts law requires organizations to adopt strict policies and procedures to physically and electronically protect personal data. New features in Rwiz allow easy set up of automatic encryption of report results. The person creating the report can select an option that forces the person running and sharing the report to encrypt results. The encryption setting is flexible allowing the report creator to select the protection of all reports or specific reports.

"While IT and HR are key players in protecting sensitive information, once data leaves their area it can be easily transmitted unsafely," said France Lampron, CEO of Enterprise Information Resources Inc. "Automatic encryption with Rwiz gives organizations peace of mind that report data is transmitted securely internally and externally."

Another feature allows the addition of a legal notice to reports. This feature can automatically pull the appropriate corporate legal disclaimer and post them in the footer section of each pdf page of a report or at the top of Excel output files. The legal notice(s) are configured at the system level making it easy to ensure that a standard legal disclaimer is applied to all output files containing sensitive data.

Rwiz is a proven, easy-to-use reporting tool that automates and streamlines report writing and distribution to provide users with quick information access while addressing the security concerns of corporate IT. Rwiz connects directly to an organization's ERP database or data warehouse and provides end-users with little or no SQL programming experience the ability to write complex queries. A robust product, Rwiz has been in use at a number of mid-sized and multi-national corporations for over 10 years.
